from
Brown County's Old Country Store

Nashville, Indiana

Brown County, Indiana

Brown County is a setting of many colors. From the pastels of spring to the lush greens of summer to autumn's brassy reds to the pristine white of winter. A variety of shops, restaurants and places to explore create a colorful kaleidoscope of the past and present.

As beautiful indoors as it is outdoors, Brown County boasts a myriad of textures, scents and friendly people to provide the visitor a warm welcome. The glint of pewter or elaborate turquoise design may catch your eye. The delicate scent of candles contrasts the clean pungency of saddle-soap on hand-tooled leather. From a fine oil painting to an artifact from rustic folklore, you'll find many enticing possibilities for exploration.

Renowned for home-cooked food, this community also offers a number of dining and drinking establishments. Casual, homespun surroundings make any meal more enjoyable. Sample succulent fried chicken, smoked meat, the famous fried biscuits and apple butter, game hen, or an ice cold mug of your favorite libation. Home-made bread, preserves and candy are a specialty here. From snacks to sweets to a full meal, dining is always a pleasure in Brown County.

Whether your preference is for fine glassware, for home-cooked food, or the quiet shelter of a covered bridge, you'll find it in Brown County. This guidebook, compliments of The Old Country Store, provides a handy reference for things to see and do.

Legend Of The Nashville House

A Brown County landmark, the Nashville House is renowned for savory home cooking, antique collectibles and gadgets, and old-fashioned hospitality.

The first hostelry in Brown County during the Civil War, the original Nashville House was a two-and-a-half story wooden structure, built in 1859. Its floors were trod by many visitors, from loggers, to artists, to travelers and residents.

In 1927 A.J. Rogers and Fred Bates Johnson purchased the structure and property, which they remodeled and officially christened the Nashville House. For the next fifteen years, a cozy country atmosphere, home cooking, and those famous fried biscuits and jam made the Nashville House the most popular place in Brown County.

Tragedy struck in 1943 when the building caught fire. The village fire fighters tried vainly to quell the blaze, and the building burned to the ground.

Soon after, a new structure was conceived and constructed by the late Jack Rogers. Though the new Nashville House had no guest rooms, the famous home cooking and old time general store would again draw scores of visitors and neighbors.

Andy Rogers, Jack's son has continued the tradition of the Nashville House since 1959. The warm native woods and memories of days gone by surround you and welcome all who enter. Modernity has of course taken place in the back of the house for food preparation, but the Brown County flavor, discovered and nurtured at the Nashville House, permeates every nook and cranny.

The rustic dining room provides a warm, casual setting to enjoy hearty home cooking and those irresistible fried biscuits. Old and new-fangled gadgets, arrays of kitchen necessities, and antiques cram the shelves of the Old Country Store. Oven-fresh breads, pies and cookies, candies and hickory-smoked meats are still favorites.

You're invited to come in to the Nashville House and sample Brown County tradition, home cooking and hospitality. All preserved in the Nashville House, the most popular landmark in Brown County.

The Nashville House Dining Room

Hot fried biscuits topped with homemade apple butter are just one of the specialties served in the Nashville House dining room. Lunch and dinner include hearty dishes cooked with the old-fashioned touch, and just the right seasoning.

The dinner menu features a variety of delicious entrees. Country-fried hamsteak with red gravy, tangy barbecued back loin ribs, baked Hoosier ham, roast turkey, tender butt steak, and the ever-popular crisp, country-fried chicken. Hot biscuits and apple butter, vegetables, crisp salad and choice of beverage complete the meal. Sassafras tea make a delightful hot or cold brew.

Desserts are served fresh from the Old Country Store bake shop ovens. Our specialty is pecan pie. Our fresh fruit cobblers are simply delectable.

The Nashville House also offers three complete luncheon selections. The daily special includes a large salad bowl, and sandwich plates. The sandwich plates feature Hoosier hickory-smoked ham plain or topped with aged cheddar cheese, tender roast turkey, and chopped steak. All sandwiches are made with oven-fresh bread from the Old Country Store kitchen. Tangy cole slaw, potato chips, homemade apple butter and beverage complete the meal.

All luncheons include vegetable, salad, beverage and a basket of those irresistible hot fried biscuits. Children's portions are available at reduced prices.

The Nashville House dining room is open from 11:30 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. Monday, and Wednesday through Sunday. Closed Tuesday (except in October—open seven days a week) Reservations are recommended. No reservations in October for less than 25 persons.

Corner of Main and Van Buren Streets in Nashville.

Brown County's Old Country Store

When you close the large wooden door and step into Brown County's Old Country Store, you're welcomed by pleasant aromas reminiscent of the past. Mouth-watering, oven-fresh baked goods, tangy sassafras, spices and tobacco.

You can browse for hours through shelves filled with old-fashioned collectibles, leather goods and antique fixtures. Kids of all ages like to examine our drawstring marble pouches and pocket knives.

The homemaker will find just about any utensil, grain, spice or condiment the good cook needs in her kitchen. Candies, cookies, pies and preserves will delight even the sweetest tooth.

Recreating the old time flavor of Brown County, the Old Country Store provides an enticing trip into the past, to the trading post of early America.

Located in the Nashville House, corner of Main and Van Buren Streets in Nashville.

Brown County Community Care Center

Located across from the Ramada Inn through Salt Creek Valley Shopping Center. A rustic, yet completely modern and up-to-date community care center for those of us who need professional and loving care.

This facility is situated in a meadow with the hill rising above Salt Creek on the south, a pasture, complete with Black Angus cattle grazing, on the east, and open grassland to the west.

To be in Brown County, cared for by professionals, and have the peace and tranquility of the hills and valleys can bring peace of mind to family and friends of all who reside here.

Reserve a room at the Brown County Ramada Inn and spend a leisurly day exploring Nashville and Brown County while investigating the facilities and care that are offered. This is a completely certified facility with Medicaid, Medicare, etc. Information is available by writing Donna Moore, Manager Brown County Community Care Center, P.O. Box 667 Phone: 812 988-6666

The Ordinary

Nashville's Extraordinary Early American Tavern

In Colonial times, an Ordinary was the tavern, restaurant and guest house where local residents and travelers gathered to share spirits and camaraderie. This same friendly atmosphere welcomes the guest to Nashville's The Ordinary, an extraordinary early American tavern.

The Ordinary menu offers a variety of delectable dishes made the old-fashioned way. Special breakfast menus include the regular choice of eggs, toast, sausage and ham. Breakfast is served all day every day, excluding Saturday evening.

Luncheon includes the salad bar alone, or combined with home-made soup and/or an extraOrdinary sandwich. All sandwiches are made with oven-fresh bread from the Old Country Store bakery.

The dinner menu offers a wide selection of "all together" full course meals. Potations are a special feature of The Ordinary. A fine selection of wine, beer and mixed drinks complement any meal, or make a quiet moment even more mellow.

We dare you to sit still while our ragtime piano player strums those rousing old-time favorites every Friday and Saturday night in the lounge.

You're invited to The Ordinary for an extraordinary time. Open every day from 11:30 a.m. till closing. Two doors south of the Nashville House on Van Buren Street in Nashville.

Brown County Ramada Inn

One of the most appealing features of the Brown County Ramada Inn is its breath-taking setting. Leisure time here is a natural. An array of quaint shops, art galleries, historic sites, and natural wonders where you can hike, ride, swim, boat, camp, or just admire, present possibilities for fascinating exploration.

The Ramada Inn is as beautiful inside as it is outside. Casual, rustic decor complements the comfort of contemporary facilities. 80 comfortable rooms are furnished with rustic, earth-tone decor, air conditioning, color tv and FM radio. For added convenience, "Lobby Shop" gift shop, one-day cleaning service, and mini-bus transportation on request to Nashville. The Ramada Inn Art Gallery features the murals of Jack LaChance for your pleasure. Tennis courts have been added for the enjoyment of all.

Elegant banquet and convention facilities can accommodate large or small groups for business or social meetings.

Hearty home cooking is a natural at the Ramada Inn. Breakfast, lunch, and dinner are served in the rustic Dining Room overlooking the hillside. The famous Sunday buffet is literally a feast, served from 11:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. For those cozy moments over a cool drink, the Harness Room is open from 11:30 til closing, with live entertainment Friday and Saturday night.

The Ramada Inn and adjacent Brown County Convention Center are located on the hillside, on Hwy. 46 on the outer east edge of Nashville. Just west of the entrance to Brown County State Park.

Brown County Convention Center

Contemporary convention facilities overlooking lush countryside make business a pleasure at the Brown County Convention Center.

Overnight accommodations are available in the comfort of the adjacent Ramada Inn, with 80 luxurious guest rooms, some with fireplaces. The Convention Center's Locust Room is a large convention room which converts into 2, 3, or 4 smaller rooms. Seating accommodates up to 800 persons theatre style, 500 classroom style, and 650 for a sitdown dinner. A full sound system is available, plus projectors, telephone jacks, and electrical outlets.

For smaller meetings, the Redbud Room and Dogwood Room can accommodate 40 persons theatre style, 30 classroom style and 30 for dinner. The Valley Room in the adjacent Ramada Inn provides additional accommodations. All meeting rooms can be equipped with 16mm, slide, and overhead projectors.

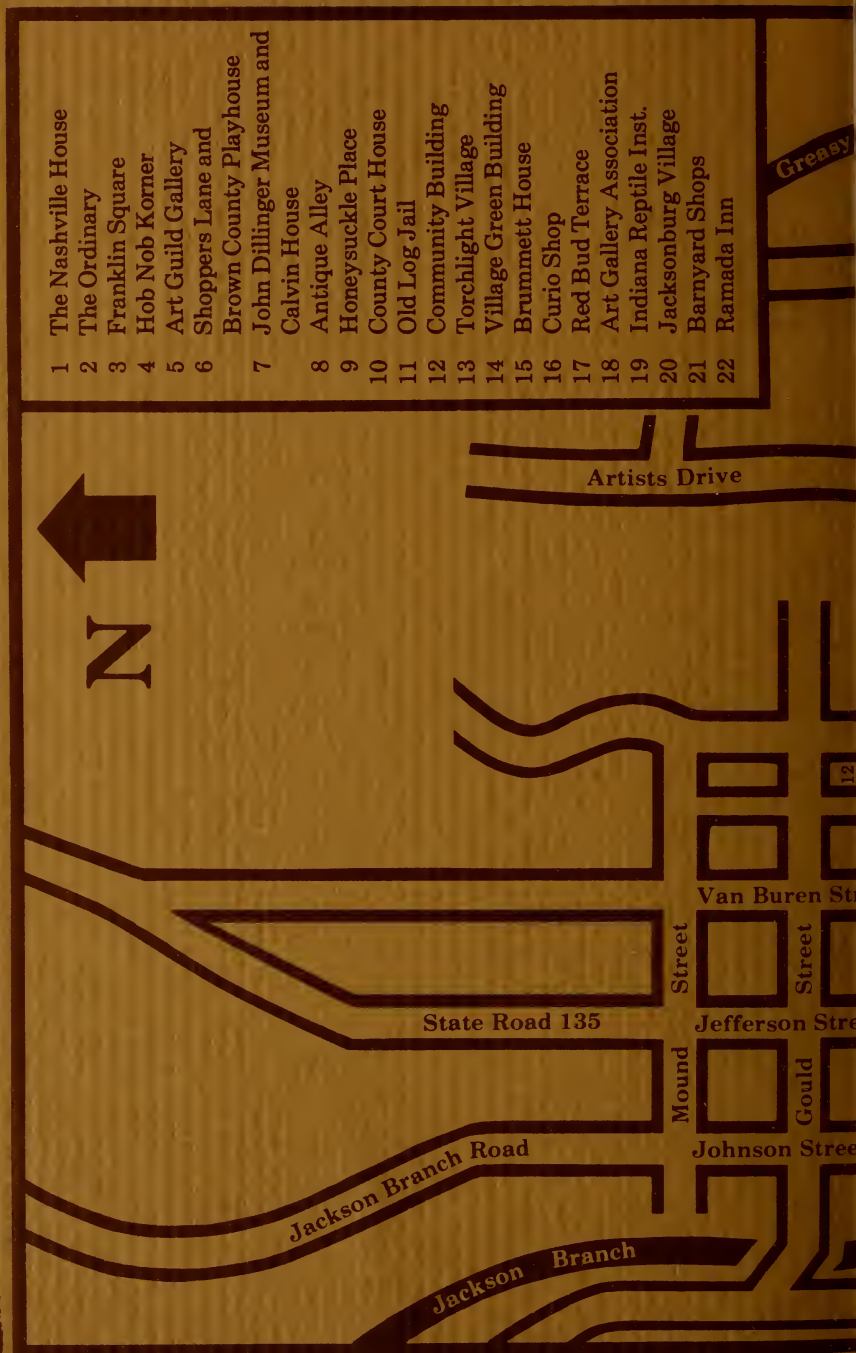

The Convention Center features a full menu, including the Hoosier home-cooked specialties. Sitdown dinners and buffets are available, or even informal luncheons served while your meeting is in session. The Ramada Inn also features our home-cooked food and excellent service.

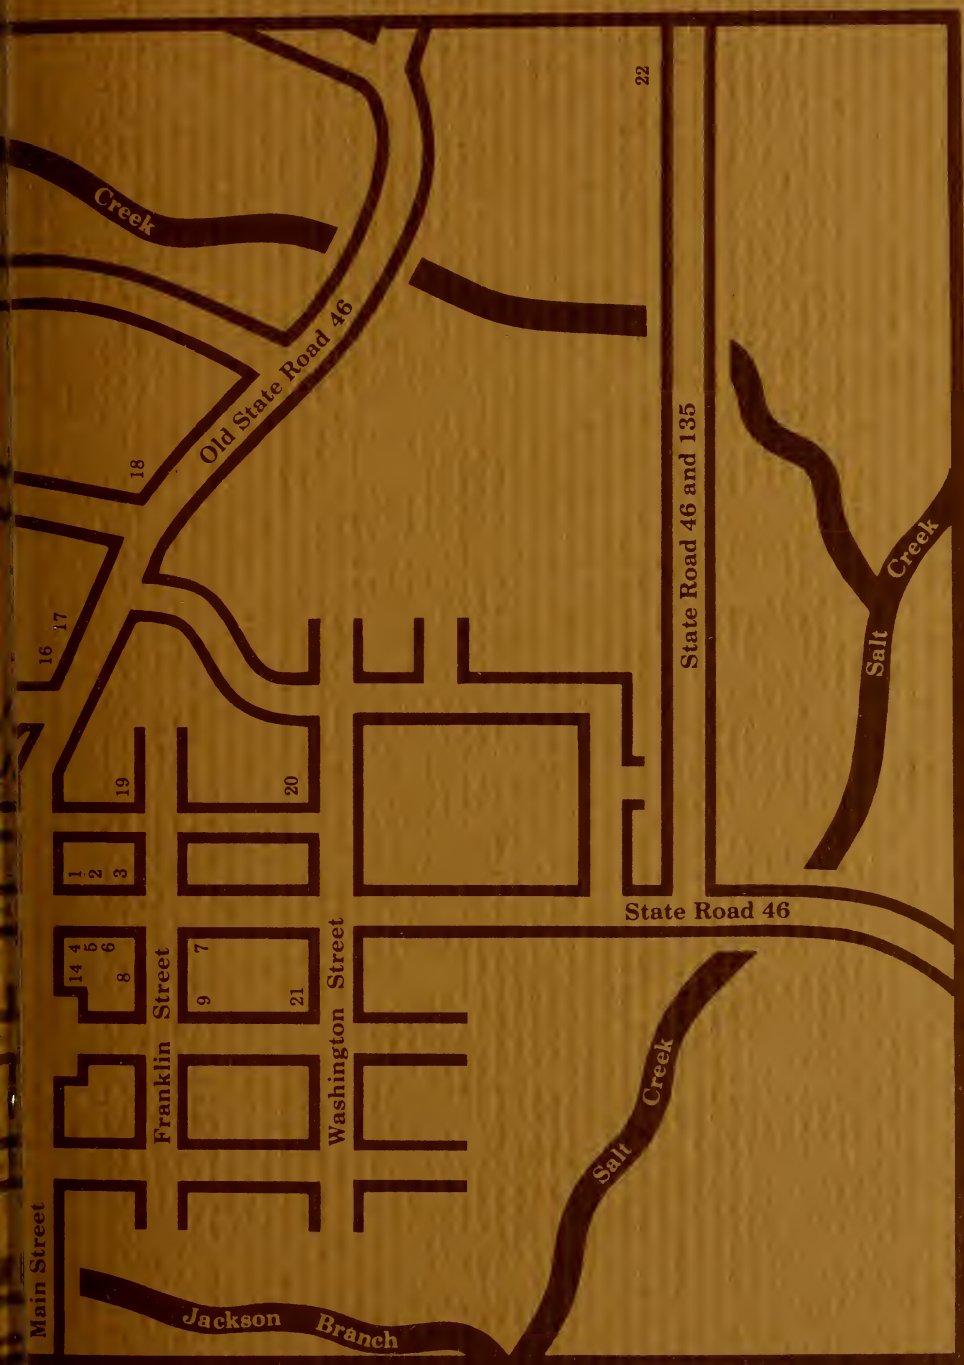

Proprietor Andy Rogers and Manager Buddy Greller will be happy to handle every detail of your meeting or convention from start to finish.

The Brown County Convention Center is secluded, yet convenient to nearby cities. Hwy. 46 on the outer east edge of Nashville, located on the hillside overlooking Brown County State Park.

Historic Sites

Nashville boasts two old-time brick residences, of unique architectural structure. One known as the House of the Weaver, which used to belong to Mary Bissell. It is now a part of the Franklin House complex at the corner of Franklin and Van Buren Streets. The other structure owned by Slim Smith, is located at the corner of Gould and Jefferson Streets.

The Brummett House is located on Johnson Street between Gould and Main. One of the earliest houses erected in Brown County, was built by Banner Brummett.

The Community Building is located behind the Court House. This building was erected by the Community Club of Nashville from native logs over sixty feet long. Some of the logs are reputed to be over 100 years old, "having been used originally in the construction of a stage station on the Old Michigan Road." The building is a two story "dog-run" or "possum-trot" scheme.

Calvin House is located on the corner of Franklin and Van Buren Streets. This large two story wood frame house was built by T.D. Calvin. Years ago it was one of the most elegant houses in the community of Nashville.

Ferguson House is now a part of the Antique Alley complex. Ferguson House had served many functions, as a rooming house, and as a private residence.

Miller's Drugstore, located on the corner of Van Buren and Main Street, was in operation until 1973.

The Nashville House Corner is the location of the Nashville House, originally constructed in 1859. A hostelry since the Civil War, the Nashville House was split and moved in 1927. A new structure with a fireplace and lobby containing the old hotel was built between the split buildings. In 1943 the building was destroyed by fire, and reconstructed in 1947.

The Sherril Minor House, located across from the Nashville House on Van Buren Street is now the site of the Brown County Art Guild. It has served a variety of purposes, even functioning as a skating rink.

The Ordinary was originally a private residence. Since then it has been a restaurant known as Dinty Moores, housed the Old Hickory Tavern, and finally became The Ordinary Tavern.

The Bartley House, on the corner of Franklin and Van Buren Streets, built by Andrew Bartley, was one of the fine old structures of Nashville.

The Poor Farm, located on the East edge of Nashville on a high piece of ground. Built as the original farm house to take care of the poor of Brown County who farmed considerable ground surrounding it. It now houses the Administration Building for the Brown County School Corporation.

The Reed-Kelp House located on Upper Jackson Branch Ridge Road. One of the largest log structures still on its original foundation and still used as a home in the state of Indiana. Built in 1858.

Fred Bates Johnson House, located on 135 North of Nashville, now houses Dave Martin and Martin's Antiques. This house was moved here from another location in the 1920's and became the residence of Fred Bates Johnson, an Indianapolis attorney.
